

Post 3rd Session News

The three Houses worked together to attempt to retrieve the mirrored sphere from the passing island that Gundal's Crew had explored earlier. There were several challenges, but ultimately the sphere was retrieved and they came back with it.

They discovered that the skeletons in the tunnel would indeed become active. If anyone came too close they gave chase for a good length of time, but they would eventually stop and return to the tunnel and remain quiescent unless approached again too closely. They only lost five soldiers to the skeletons.

They were successful getting the sphere, however, travelling to the pickup point they were also attacked by several trolls and took significant losses. It ended up being a very expensive expedition.

All this about a mirrored sphere is considered something that's not supposed to be talked about. It is anyway, and there's lots of murmuring and wondering and talks of stories and myths spreading through the Houses and into the Dweller population. People are a little unsettled and they're whispering words about magic. Magic. Magic. Magic!
